

EIOPA Occupational Pensions Stakeholder Group

Elisa Luciano

Elisa Luciano holds a MSc in Economics and a PhD in Applied Mathematics. She was appointed Professor of Finance in 1994. She worked both for Italian Universities, including the Catholic University and Bocconi University in Milan, and for foreign Universities, including the École Normale Supérieure in Cachan, Paris.

She is currently a Professor at the University of Torino, the Scientific Director of LTI@Unito, a think tank on long-term investors, a Fellow of Collegio Carlo Alberto, of NETSPAR, and has been a Visiting Scholar at the Wharton School, Cornell University, INSEAD and the University of Zurich.

She is an expert in asset allocation, asset pricing, insurance and risk management. She has published around 100 articles in Academic journals, including the Journal of Finance and the Review of Financial Studies. She has written books for MIT Press, J. Wiley and E. Elgar.

She matured also an experience as a consultant for banks, insurance companies and law firms. She has served as non-executive Board Member of insurance companies, as well as Auditor of Pension Funds and Investment Committee Member of Endowments.

She received several prizes and grants, including the best paper award from the Journal of Risk Finance (2007) and grants from both the Bachelier Institute-Europlace Institute of Finance, Paris (2013), and the Global Risk Institute, Toronto (2014-16).

She stays in the top 2% SSRN Authors, top 8% women economist (all years) according to REPEC-IDEAS.