

Dominique Thienpont studied law and business administration at the University of Louvain in Belgium, and got an MBA from Cornell University in the US.

From 1992 to 1999, he worked with KPMG in Belgium as an auditor, where he served mainly clients from the financial sector (banks, investment firms, investment funds) and obtained the professional qualification of certified auditor under the Belgian system (Réviseur d'entreprises).

He joined the European Commission in 1999, where he worked first in the Company Law, Accounting and Auditing Unit, then in the Insurance and Pensions Unit, and finally as Deputy Head of Unit and Acting Head of Unit in the Banking Unit.

Since 2015, he is a Senior Expert Legal Counsellor working directly with the Director in charge of Banks, insurance and financial crime.
