Torun Reinhammar

Torun Reinhammar is a Senior Account Manager for Capital Markets at CDP, the global non-profit helping companies, investors and policymakers measure and reduce their environmental impact. Torun is responsible for CDP's efforts to engage and enable European capital market actors, such as pension funds, to understand the level and the timeline of climate change related financial risks of their investments, as well as to measure the positive and negative impacts of their activities on climate change mitigation and the environment.

Before joining CDP, she worked with ESG strategies and analysis in the Asset Management Department of the Swedish insurance and pensions company Folksam, which included developing strategies for decarbonizing the portfolio.

CDP features in a range of investor-led initiatives such as The Investor Agenda, which includes a commitment to support CDP's disclosure and action requests, and to report in line with the recommendations of the Task Force on Climate-related Financial Disclosures (TCFD). As part of the CDP Europe Capital Markets team, she has also supported the development of Climetrics, the world's first and only climate rating for funds, and CDP's Temperature Rating of companies.

She holds a BA in political science and journalism from University of Gothenburg and a Diploma of international studies of politics and economics from Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies.
